What sort of matrimonial existence must Mr. Dent of Winchester have passed, I wonder, who as soon as his Deborah was grassed over could indite upon her so flippant a couplet as this?

"Here lies the body of Deborah Dent. She kicked up her heals and away she went."

We charitably hope that it was the extreme seductiveness of the rhyme which caused him to represent the lady as having departed so very summarily. Our epitaph makers go a good deal out of the way for a good rhyme, and when they find a dys-sillable to match with another they hesitate at nothing in order to bring it in. At Doncaster I read: "Here lies two brothers, by misfortune surround

One died of his wounds and the other was drownded." And again, at Bidford, Devon: "Her marriage day appointed was, And her wedding clothes provided, But when the day arrived did, She Sickened and she died did,"

A prolonged medical statement of the disease of which the departed may chance have died, is extremely popular. At Acton, in Cornwall, there is this particular account of how one Mr. Morton came by his end:

"Here lies entombed one Roger Morton, Whose sudden death was early brought on; Trying one day his corn to mow off. The razor slipped and cut his toe off: The toe, or rather what it grew to, An inflamation quickly flew to; The parts they took to mortifying, And poor dear Rogers took to dying." And here is a still more entertain-ing one, upon a certain lady in Davonshire

tence or idle bravado: "Here lies Betsy Cruden, She wood leaf'd but she cooden 'Twas na grief na sorrow as made she decay

But this bad leg as carried she away; Whenever I read (and it is often) folks who were passionately desirous to leave this vale of tears, I shake my head, and quote the simple minded Betty: "For all this," say I "they wood a leaf'd but they cooden.

To complete these medical extracts, may quote this warning cypress flower, of course, she says. Alls you that for Hosiery she would as soon think of going to a blacksmith shop, as any any other place than the Book Store, Killed by drinking of the Cheltenham waters." If we had stuck to Epsom salts, We'd not been a lying in these here vaults." There is to my mind, a touching sorrow conveyed in the following most ungrammat-ical verses, evidently composed by one of the unlettered Wiltshire parents themselves:

"Benesth this yew tree Buried would he be. Because his father, he, Planted this vew tree." And something of the same kind, although in a less degree, I feel belongs to this one from Guilsfield, Montgomeryshire:

"Here lies John Shore; I say no more; He was alive In-65."

And in others there is more stated than is quite necessary. In Grantham churchyard "John Palfreymac, who is buried here, Was aged four and twenty year;

And near this place his mother lies; Likewise his father when he dies." This superfluousness sometimes extends even to manifest falsehood as in Llanymy nech church yard, in Montgomeryshin where it is thus written: "Here lies John Thomas, And his three children dear.

Two are buried at Owestry, And one here." Dr. I. Letsome wrote the following epitaph for his own tombstone; but it is not likely that he allowed his friends, or at least his patients, to read it until he was under the turf, or out of practice: "When people's ill, they comes to I, I physics, bleeds and sweats'em; etimes they live, sometimes they die; What's that to 1? I. Letsom" (lets 'em). The best of these professional adieux is, however, that upon a certain Mrs. Shoven, a cook. It consists of two stanzas, or, as she might have called them herself a couple

> "Underneath this crust Lies some mouldering dust Of Eleanor Batchelor Shoven, Well versed in the arts Of pie, cutards and tarts, And the lucrative trade of the oven.

"When she'd lived long enough, She made her last puff, A puff by her husband much praised, And now, she doth lie And makes a dirt pie,

In hopes that her crust may be raised." I cannot conclude these jottings from the tombs more fitly than with this voice, or rather with these two voices, from the North, communicated to me by a stonecutting friend. A reward, it seems, was offered for the best epitaph upon a celebrated provost of Dundee. The town council un-able to decide between the relative merits of the two which follow, and both were placed upon the monument:

"Here lies John. Provost of Dundee, Here lies Him, here lies He." The second ran even still more remark

"Here lies John, Provost of Dundee,

Hallelujah, Hallelujee!" A friend informs us that a unique inscription may be found on a stone erected over the remains of Parson Brady, a Presbyterian divine, who died a number of years ago. He was buried in a small town in Perry county, Pennsylvania. It ran some-what after this fashion:

"Here lies Parson Brady. This stone was erected by his sorrowing congregation, and cost forty dollars.

DISTRESSING CAUSUALTY .- A sad occur rence took place on Lake Pepin a few days ago. Four men and four women from Lake City were out for a pleasure sail on the Lake, and when near the middle a flaw of wind capsized the boat. They clung to the boat, but three of the women and one man became exhausted and sunk before re lief arrived. Two of the ladies were daughters of Judge Stout, of Lake City.

HAW AND INFLAMED, your food distresses you, and you can only take certain kinds, and even of that your system does not get half the nourishment it contains, as the acrimonous fluid of the canker eats it up; then your complexion loses its bloom and becomes sallow or greenish, and your best day is gone. For want of nourishment your system becomes lose and flabby, and the fibres of your body become relaxed. Then follow a train of diseases which the Medical discovery is peculiarly adapted to Palpitation of the heart, pain in the side, weak-ness of the spine and small of the back, pain of the hip joint when you retire, irregularity of the bowels, and also that most excruciating of diseases, the
